Ethnicity in India

Group selection

The following groups are considered politically relevant at the national level: Hindi (Non SC/ST OBCs), Other Backward Classes (Castes), Scheduled Castes, Scheduled Tribes, Other Muslims, Telugu (Non SC/ST/OBCs), Marathi (non-SC/ST), Tamil (non-SC/ST), Bengali (non-SC/ST), Gujarati (non-SC/ST/OBCs), Kannada (non-SC/ST/OBCs), Malayalam (non-SC/ST), Oriya (non-SC/ST), Punjabi-Sikhs (non-SC/ST/OBCs), Assamese (non-SC/ST), Kashmiri Muslims, Manipuri, Naga, Mizo, Indigenous Tripuri, and Bodo.

Power relations

Regional differences, though important, are not the only differences that matter in Indian politics. Religion and, more importantly, caste, play an even more important role in Indian politics. However, it is difficult to incorporate religion, caste and regional differences together in calculating ethnic fractionalization since caste and regional identities cross-cut. This problem should be kept in mind when relying on EPR data for India. The current coding, reflecting only regional identities, does not reflect the ethnic make-up and power configuration correctly. Despite the dominance of the Congress party till the late 1980s, regional groups have always been provided representation in the Indian cabinets.

While we can safely say that the Hindi speakers were the senior partners until 1991, we cannot use the senior-junior classification for the phase after 1991. The southern parties (Telugu, Tamil, Kannada and Malayalam especially the first two) were clearly more influential in the second phase. It appears still worthwhile considering the different regions as equal partners in the government

The same holds for the time after 1999, although Hindi speakers were more influential (albeit marginally). The senior-junior categorization is used simply because there is no alternative. Also, Punjabi & Sikh categories have been combined into one. It does not make sense to include them as separate categories, although all Sikhs are Punjabis but not all Punjabis are Sikhs. This is because non-Sikh Punjabis are not politically active or salient (they do not have their own party but Sikhs do).

Since 1999, political mobilization along the lines of castes became acute. The Dalits and OBCs became politically assertive and captured power in many states and displaced upper caste hegemony. At the centre, such regional/caste based parties enjoyed greater participation in political power by becoming strong partner in the coalition government. Further, local self government/Panchayati raj act was also introduced during this period. With this, even at local level, the deprived and discriminated groups so far captured power wherever their concentration was significantly high. Thus from the local level to the Parliament, existing power relation between different ethno-social groups got altered. And this trend is likely to continue for sometime in the future.

EPR deliberately underestimates all population shares in relation to the census numbers of linguistic groups, owing to the fact that EPR recognizes "Scheduled Tribes" & "Scheduled Castes" as well as "Other Backward Classes/Castes" as distinct ethnic categories. These groups are probably members in all other groups but especially among the Hindi speaking population which explains why the official Hindi speaking population is listed with a population share of approximately 0.4 in the census but only with 0.26 in EPR.

In 2009, Freedom House <sup>(2450)</sup> notes that Muslims are under-represented in public office and reports a trend of more overt discrimination against Muslims. However, discrimination from officials takes place at communal and social levels, and is not systematically political.

Following the 2009 parliamentary elections, the Cabinet remained dominated by the United Progressive Alliance, led by the Congress Party, with the main rival, the Bharatiya Janata Party-led National Democratic Alliance in opposition. Manmohan Singh remained as Prime Minister for a second term (in office since 2004) <sup>(2451; 2452; 2453)</sup>. Overall, this suggests that there was little if any shifts in the political representation of the various ethnic groups, reflecting perhaps also the stability of democracy in India more generally <sup>(2454)</sup>. Also there were no major changes in the states of India, and thus access to autonomy provisions of specific groups.

In 2014, there was a change in the executive, as well as the creation of the state Telangana <sup>(2455)</sup>.

Kashmiri Muslims

The National Coalition is the Kashmiri political party that is clearly distinct from the Muslim League <sup>(2456, 177)</sup> prior to independence. It was also the driving force behind Kashmiri nationalism until the mid-1980s. Varshney <sup>(2457, 1006)</sup> distinguishes between Kashmiri Muslims and Jammu Muslims on the grounds of ethnicity. The Kashmiri valley is home to 95 % Kashmiri Muslims who speak a different language (Kashmiri) than most other Muslims in India (Urdu or local languages). Moreover, Nehru promised Kashmiri Muslims a right to self-determination at independence although this has later been denied by the Indian government (<sup>2458</sup>, 176). In 1953 Sheikh Abdullallah, the leader of the National Coalition is imprisoned and token minisisters are put into his place. From 1953 to 1975 Kashmir was divested of any prerogatives it once had vis-a-vis other states. Sheikh Abdullah becomes prime minister once more in 1976. While Varshney mentions that the Article 370 of the Indian constitution that gives special rights to Kashmir was "kept alive" in 1975, Jalal concludes that "self-determination for Kashmiris was now history" (<sup>2459</sup>, 179). When he dies in 1983 his son takes over the reigns of the National Coalition. Meddling by the Congress (I) Party with extremists (also see <sup>2460</sup>) and later coalition of the National Alliance and the Congress Party lead to the demise of the National Alliance and the predominance of more extremist Muslim Parties (<sup>2461</sup>, 1017). In 1987 the National Alliance enters coalition with Congress after the state elections have been rigged to prevent more extremist Muslim parties to win a majority in the state parliament. It appears reasonable to code Kashmiri Muslims as powerless after the National Coalition ceases to have any power within Kashmir, i.e. after 1987.

In 2008 Kashmiris were able to vote in an election that "has been notably free of violence and coercion", as the New York Times reports (<sup>2462</sup>). The grandson of Sheikh Abdullah captured the reigns of the state ministership. However, the Indian government has continued to interfere in state affairs repeatedly since and thousands of paramilitary troops are still roaming the area trying to capture rebels. At the moment it is too early, to revoke the powerless coding.

Population of Jammu & Kashmir is about 64% Muslim. Only Muslims in Kashmir count towards Kashmiri Muslims and they make up about 97 to 99 per cent of all people living in the Kashmir valley. Based on 1981 and 2001 censuses population is between 0.0045 and 0.005. The 0.0045 are coded throughout all periods.

There are separatist groups and a strong conflict between India and Pakistan in Jammu and Kashmir. There are claims of discrimination and human rights violations, especially within the framework of the "Armed Forces Act". Nevertheless, the status "powerless" was maintained. Concerning the regional autonomy status of Kashmiri Muslims arguments in favour and against can be found: It has a special constitutionally granted autonomy status (article 370), which means that, except in the areas of defense, communication, finance and foreign policy, the decisions of the Indian parliament are not binding for Jammu and Kashmir (<sup>2463</sup>). Additionally, Mehbooba Mufti, a Muslim woman is the current Chief Minister. On the other hand, the "Armed Forces Act" is still in place, the BJP is trying to abolish some of the special privileges of this state and parties in favour of separation from India are not present on the official political scene (<sup>2464</sup>). Hence, the status "no regional autonomy" was chosen.

In August 2019, following separatist insurgencies in the state of Jammu and Kashmir, which left armed forces personnel, police and government officials dead, the central government announced major changes towards the constitutional status of Jammu and Kashmir, ultimately revoking Article 370, which gave special status to the state and splitting the state into two union territories. This was followed by deployment of security forces, arrests of renowned political figures and shutting down internet and phone services (<sup>2465</sup>). This was condemned by various local and international stakeholders.

According to the USDS, political gatherings were restricted in Jammu and Kashmir to separatist political parties and occasionally members of political groups were detained by security forces upon peaceful assembly (<sup>2466</sup>). Also, Amnesty International reports on the increasing number of hate speech directed mainly towards Muslims in India including BJP political leaders which have further ignited hatred and disunity (<sup>2467</sup>). Thus, we code Kashmiri Muslims as "discriminated" from 2020 following the EPR 1st January rule.

Bodo

With regards to the regional autonomy coding of the Bodo, according to Egreteau (<sup>2468</sup>, 56) the peace accord between the Indian government and the Bodo freedom fighters created a Bodo Autonomous Council in February of 1993, "but the administrative's body territorial jurisdiction was scattered as most of the townships are not contiguous." Bhaumik (<sup>2469</sup>, 23-4) reports that the deal never went into effect due to resistance by the Assamese and Bodo extremists. Bhaumik concludes that an effective settlement was only reached in 2003.

Gujarati

Since May 2014 Narendra Modi, a Gujarati is India's Prime Minister. However, Modi doesn't politicize explicitly in favour of Gujaratis (<sup>2470</sup>). Hence the "junior partner" status was maintained. Instead, Modi, who also is from an OBC community, claims to politicize on behalf of that group, but nevertheless it is not enough to code the OBC as "senior partner".

Marathi

During the Singh and Modi governments a relatively large number of people from Maharashtra have occupied or are occupying ministerial positions (<sup>2471</sup>). However, most of them don't politicise explicitly in favour of Marathis. Hence the "junior partner" status was maintained.

Naga

There are still separatist groups and there are claims of discrimination against the Nagas, but keeping the "powerless" status is more appropriate (autociteMRG 2017). It could be argued that Nagaland does not have regional autonomy, since the "Armed Forces Act" is in place (<sup>2472</sup>). This act gives strong powers to the military and has been criticized for enabling human rights violations (<sup>2473</sup>). Nevertheless, Nagaland has a legislative assembly, a state government and its Chief Minister T. R. Zeliang is a Naga (autociteDITN 2017). Hence the Nagas were coded as having regional autonomy.

Other Muslims

Since the BJP came to power in 2014 discrimination against Muslims has increased (<sup>2474</sup>). However, until August 2017 Mohammad Hamid Ansari, a Muslim, was India's Vice-president (The Economic Times 2017). While there is no political discrimination, there is discrimination on a socio-economic levels and the political elite is relatively inactive towards those acts (for example punishment of cow slaughter) (<sup>2475</sup>). Hence, the status powerless was chosen, as a compromise between socio-economic discrimination and some political participation (e.g. Vice president).

In 2019, Modi was re-elected (first elected in 2014) after an astonishing victory winning the majority of the seats (303 out of 543) which was unprecedented up to 2019 and being elected as Prime Minister for another five-year term. An interesting feature about Modi is that he has never held a press-conference and could thus never be questioned about his stance on minority (mainly Muslims) issues (<sup>2476</sup>). However, in December 2019 the controversial Citizenship Amendment Bill was passed, which has sparked ongoing protests in the country, mainly led by students in defiance of this policy followed by the BJP party. The Citizenship Amendment Bill, unofficially referred to as the new "Anti-Muslim" law of India provides citizenship to religious minorities from Pakistan, Bangladesh, and Afghanistan if they are Hindu, Sikh, Buddhist, Jain, Parsi or Christian Buddhist (not mentioning Muslim religious minorities). Critics have deemed the bill unconstitutional, considering that it violates the secular nature of the Indian constitution and the dubiousity around the exclusion of Muslim refugees from countries like Myanmar. As such, the bill would extend citizenship rights to non-Muslim illegal immigrants from Pakistan, Bangladesh and Afghanistan but not Muslims per se (<sup>2477</sup>). Thus, we code Other Muslims as "discriminated" from 2020 following the EPR 1st January rule.

Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes

The Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes, two separate groups as they “do not share a common political and social history” and “are also culturally, linguistically and religiously distinct”, have a similar political position, yet only the Scheduled Tribes enjoy regional autonomy (<sup>2478</sup>: 4). Since 2017 Ram Nath Kovind was elected as India's new president. However, the executive power lies within the Prime Minister. The council of ministers, which was voted by the Indian parliament in 2019, is composed mainly of wealthy men from Hindu-speaking states. To be more precise only 64% of the state and union territories are represented in his government. However, in terms of caste, the new cabinet of 2019 represents the Schedules Castes and Scheduled Tribes better (<sup>2479</sup>).
